Highlights from the Third Edition of CE'M PLACE Meetings between friends with value for business

On November 4, at the Center of Excellence for Furniture (#CEM), we discussed the impact businesses have on the environment and the ecological responsibility of manufacturers. The event focused on the DNSH (Do No Significant Harm) principle, a key concept for sustainable businesses designed to minimize environmental harm and ensure compliance with environmental standards.

Through a practical and informative format, attendees learned more about legislative obligations, required authorization documents, and the six main environmental objectives promoted by DNSH. We explored how these requirements should be integrated into every business plan, project, or product for a more sustainable future.

Join us at future CEM PLACE meetings, organized by Transylvanian Furniture Cluster – a great opportunity to discover relevant topics and practical solutions for responsible entrepreneurship!
